District of Columbia, Washington County, ss.: John Dice, Pressman for The Evening Star Newspaper Company, having been first duly sworn, deposes and says: That the figures above given are correctly stated; that they represent the number of copies of THE EVEN-ING STAR printed and delivered from the press room on the days named to supply the current and ordinary demand therefor, and that, to the best of his knowledge and belief, all of said number of copies were actually sold and circulated as the usual and regular daily issues of said paper. John Dice. Sworn and subscribed before me this 3d day of April, A. D. 1876. JOHN T. C. CLARK, J. P. [SEAL.] Samuel G. Young, Cashier of The Evening Star Newspaper Company, being first duly sworn, deposes and says: That the figures above given are correctly stated; that they represent only the regular and bona fide circu lation of THE EVENING STAR newspaper on the days and dates named, and that no copies were printed or furnished for gratultous circulation, or on account of any fictitious, irregular, or extraordinary orders, or for any other purpose than to supply the current and average public demand for said EVENING STAR; and further, that all of said copies were actually sold and circulated in the uniform and usual course of business.

The result of the Connecticut election does not seem to justify either party in any great amount of glorification. While the republicans make a considerable gain on the popular vote, the democrats seem to have inthus securing to them the U.S. Senatorship. In one sense both parties may be said to have achieved a victory, and that is in the fact that the rag-money infection does not appear to have made any serious inroads upon their ranks. Some of the inflationists were sanguine enough to claim that the greenback candidate for governor would make an equal if not a winning race with his competitors, the republican and democratic candidates, but his vote makes, altogether, a very insig. nificant feature in the returns. This verdict by the practical business people of Connecticut should serve as a lesson for those who fancy that the cheap money delusion will win with the mass of the thinking people of the country. The repudiation of the ragmoney theory by the people of Connecticut is the more significant because so large a proportion of the population of that state is made up of laboring men, mill-operatives, and mechanics, who have been supposed to he particularly liable to be led away by the cheap money talk.

With a view to reform the civil service to a certain degree, a Tennessee Representafour years. This would be a radical change in the civil service, but in what manner it elective postmaster would be but the slave of the party which placed him in position, and the office would become more of a political machine than at present. It is scarcely necessary to add that the members of Congress who now control such appointments will never vote for a bill which proposes to divest them of their patronage in this direction. Mr. Glover, chairman of the Real Estate

Pool Committee, and some of the correspondents want to reduce Hallet Kilbourn to a diet of bread and water, because his present jail fare is too sumptuous to make his incarceration a sufficient "punishment." This may all be very well for Mr. Glover, who doubtless feels that he is likely to make a very ridiculous figure before the country by his real-estate pool, "water-haul," and the summary imprisonment of a business man not charged with any crime, simply because he refuses to expose his business affairs at the demand of a House committee; but why class, invariably refused to answer similar questions propounded under threat of Congressional imprisonment, should join Glover in his fussy demonstrations, is not so easily

To-morrow an election will be held in Rhode Island, when state officers and a new legislature will be chosen. The new legislature will elect a United States Senator to succeed Henry B. Anthony, republican, whose time expires next March. The last legislature was republican by ten majority in the Senate and forty-eight majority in the House. Three tickets are before the people, headed as follows: For Governor, Henry Lippitt, republican, present incumbent; W. B. Beach, democrat and Albert C. Howard, prohibition. The democrats adopted a platform favoring hard money among other things; the republicans did not frame a platform. At the election for Governor in 1875 the vote stood: Lippitt, republican. 8,368; Cutler, democrat, 5,166; Hazard, independent and prohibition, 8,724, giving Hazard a plurality of 356 over Lippitt. The latter was, however, elected Governor by the legislature, receiving 70 votes to 36 for Hazard.

The fact has been developed before a Congressional committee that the profits of many of the mail-route contractors a few years since were simply enormous. One contractor made an annual profit of $120,000, per quarter, making their yearly profits $400,000. It is easy to see, therefore, why the expenditures of the Post Office department in the past have been so largely in excess of the receipts. A few years since it was almost impossible to find responsible parties, outside of the large contractors, who would carry the mails over long lines and be content with a moderate profit. Of late, howmost of the old monopolies have been pushed to the wall. There is a fair prospect that if the department is continually watchful in the matter of awarding contracts the government will ultimately secure an honest service at a reasonable compensation.

anybody in the preparation of his bill relating to third-class mail matter. A committee of the New York board of trade had a conference with Postmaster James yestermileage clause, on the ground that merchants and other senders of third-class matter were often unable to tell the exact distance from one post office to another. The proposal to stamp all such matter with the name of the dispatching office was also declared to be impracticable in many cases, and other clauses were declared liable to misconstruction. The committee are to confer with the Postmaster General in regard to the subject.
